

White Negative Painting

Cut a sheet of white paper and a sheet of black paper in half and then tape (or glue) them back together so that you have two sheets that are half white and half black. Give your child both black and white paint so that they can see that black paint doesn't show up on black paper and white paint doesn't show up on white paper. Have them explore the differences between painting on black paper and painting on white paper. (Also, this will work with a black marker and white chalk.)
